YOU read on this page last week-end an Associated Press survey of the issues which will probably come before the voters in the next state campaign. There will be: The liquor question; the sales tax question; the old age pension question; the question of financial relief for the bankrupt county governments. It is The Star's position that these questions are inter-related. It is our belief that you can't take a positive and arbitrary stand on one of them without vastly affecting the others.

Value Day Specials Offered at Hope's Stores Wednesday

Arrangements Completed Here Monday by 22 Well-Known Merchants

BAND CONCERT 2:30

$25 in Prizes Will Be Awarded Persons Shopping Here Wednesday

Plans for Hope's first Value Day were nearing completion Monday as local merchants prepared their stocks for the "Feast of Values" celebration Wednesday.

Twenty-two Hope merchants are participating in this one-day event and each has spent much time and effort having their stocks approved, marked and certified as value day specials.

In addition to the hundreds of special bargains offered by the stores participating, special entertainment has been arranged. The Hope Boys' Band will parade and will give a special concert for the occasion. The parade will start at 2:30 p. m. Wednesday.

Another interesting feature for the Value Day event is the $25 in prizes that will be awarded for the largest family attending this event, for the family coming the greatest distance and for the newest bride and groom. Full particulars on these prizes are given on page eight of today's paper.

The Value Day emblem, designating that the product is an approved and verified "Value Day Special," will mark featured articles, and each merchant participating will display banners, printed in two colors, across the show windows of their stores.

Hot Springs Ready for Hope Contest

Only One Touchdown Difference in Teams' Comparative Scores

HOT SPRINGS, Ark.—Hailed as champions of the farwestern Arkansas division of high school football, Foy Hammonts' scrapping Bobcats from Hope High School came here Thursday afternoon to give Hot Springs their first taste of Thanksgiving Day football in a number of years. It will be the last and only day game for the Trojan gridder this season.

Although both teams were knocked out of the running for the state title teams have shown more power and strength than the teams which defeated them earlier in the season.

Hope's major conquest among its nine victories this year was 7-to-0 victory over the powerful DeQueen team.

League Postpones Its Embargo on Oil

Mussolini Wins Diplomatic Move in League Session

Committee of 18, Scheduled to Meet Friday, Postpones Decision

ITALY RAPS U. S. A.

"More Radical Than Even League Members," Is View of Italians

GENEVA, Switzerland.—(AP)—Premier Mussolini scored a diplomatic victory in his campaign against sanctions Monday.

The League of Nations announced that the meeting of the sanctions committee of 18, scheduled for Friday, to consider an oil embargo against Italy, had been postponed to an undetermined date.

Italy is surprised and hurt at what it interpreted Monday as the American government's determination to outdo even sanctionist countries in the oil embargo.

How the United States could become "an accessory to this British policy" is inconceivable, one official source said at Rome.

Ethiopians Win

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia.—(Copyright Associated Press)—The Ethiopian government claimed Monday that the tide of battle on the northern front was definitely turning in favor of Ethiopia, as the result of two victories within three days, by crack troops under Dejazmach Worede.

Semi-official reports from the south stated also that the Italians had been driven from Goralah, a fortified town in Ogaden province, with heavy losses. The Fascists had seized that town early in their penetration from Italian Somaliland.

By the Associated Press

Postponement of the League of Nations sanctions committee meeting to consider an oil embargo against Italy next Friday was "arranged" Sunday night, leading to the hope in Geneva that peace negotiations between Italy and Ethiopia may soon result in an agreement.

Action of Great Britain, a strong supporter of projected oil sanctions against Mussolini's government, in agreeing with France to recommend a postponement caused this reaction.

The League Committee of Eighteen was to have considered adding other "key products," as well as oil, to the list of raw materials which can not be exported to Italy by League members.

In London an authoritative source said that Great Britain agreed to the postponement at the request of Premier Laval, reported to have said he would be unable to leave Paris because of the internal situation in France.

Reliable sources in Paris reported that Great Britain and France sought postponement of the meeting in view of the "serious consequences" such an embargo might have on European peace. This decision grew out of a conference between Premier Laval and Ambassador Sir George Russell.

At Geneva some League officials had predicted the sanctions committee would set an early date for an oil embargo in order to hasten the end of the African war.

The United States is a key factor in any such embargo, although it is not a member of the League of Nations. Secretary Kellogg has asked American oil interests voluntarily to

National Government Charges 'Revolt' Is Communist Uprising

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil.—(AP)—An army group which federal officials said was composed of Communists held Natal in its power Monday, defying the national government.

President Vargas called his cabinet in an emergency meeting to consider the situation in the great northern area affected by the Natal outbreak. It is believed the rebellion was undertaken by uncommissioned officers of the army in an effort to gain power.

American Cotton Trade Faces New Peril as Japan Moves to Seize North China

U. S. Exports to Be Hit Hard If Japan Raises Own Staple

Shansi, Hopei and Shantung Are Important Cotton-Growing Regions

BATTLE FOR TRADE

Japanese Already Cutting Into British, American Sales in Orient

By NEA Service

Japanese control over the northern provinces of China may turn out to be another staggering blow at the already groggy cotton-growing industry of the United States.

No two persons would seem farther apart than the southern share-cropper and the Japanese soldier stationed at the Manchukuo border. No two are, in distance. But there is a close connection, nevertheless.

Whatever degree of political control Japan gets over North China, there is no question at all that she will soon dominate the region economically. And that means access to development of a region that can produce within a few years all the raw cotton Japan needs except for the very highest grades.

The provinces of Shansi, Hopei (Chuhli), and Shantung are all cotton-growing regions. Maj.-Gen. Konji Dojima, "The Lawrence of Manchuria," who smoothed the Japanese path into Manchukuo before the troops occupied it, and who has been active in founding the separatist move in North China, has been urging for sometime that Japanese cotton experts be brought in. It is more than likely they are already there.

Double Blow at U. S.

Remember that Japanese cotton concessions in Ethiopia were brought to light when the Italian adventure there was begun. That is how eager Japan is to develop its own sources of raw cotton.

If the North China fields could be made to yield a large part of the cotton Japan now imports from the United States, it could be cheaply taken to Japan and made there into piece goods.

These could be sold in China and the East even more cheaply than the present cotton cloth, which is regarded as a trade menace by both the United States and Great Britain. Thus the United States would suffer not only loss of a great market for raw cotton, but further loss of markets for exported cotton cloth.

Great Iron Industry, Too

But there is more in the coveted five provinces than potential cotton fields. In Shansi is the oldest iron industry in the world, which has been producing iron for 2000 years. That is because the province contains that combination of coal and iron ore that has produced all the iron and steel centers of the world.

Hopei is largely an agricultural region, and while they are not among the great coal fields of the world, they are more than sufficient to support local needs for years. Iron ore reserves are estimated at 300 million tons, an item calculated to make Japanese mouths water in a country which has been buying up old ships for scrap iron.

Japan already controls 90 per cent of the usable iron resources in China, anyway, through investments.

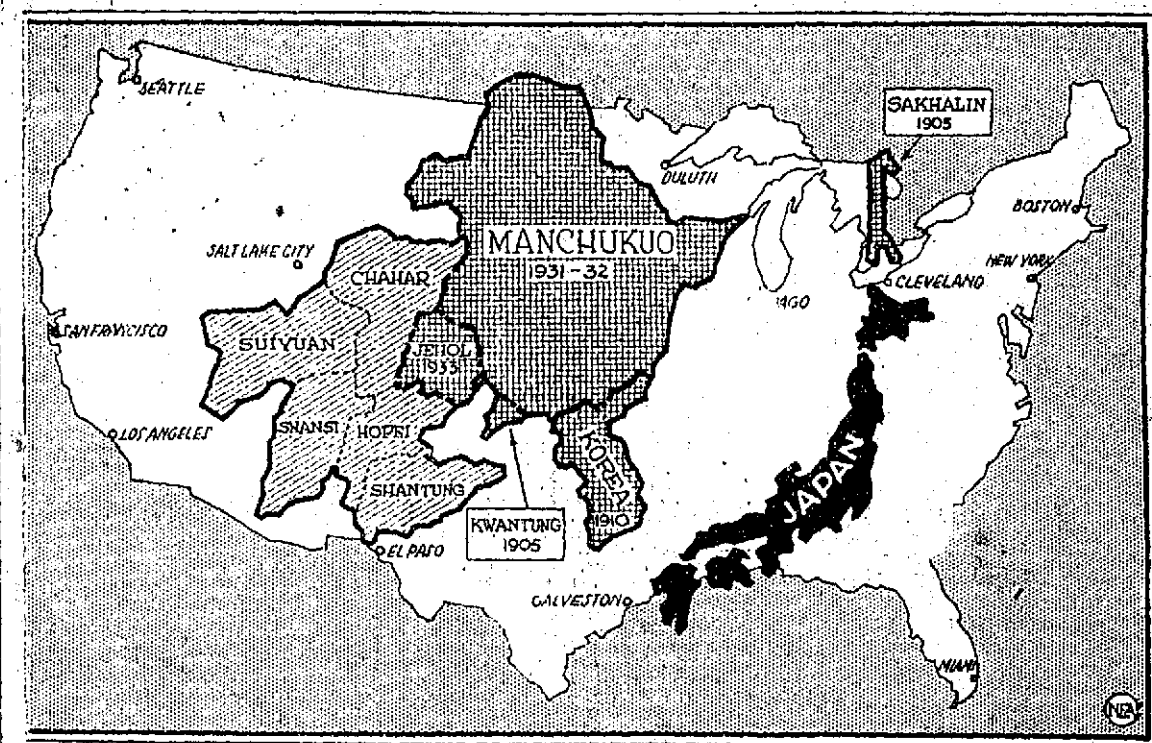

Hopei is largely an agricultural region, whose rice and soy beans might well come in handy for crowded Japan, and a center for the raising of horses, mules, and other livestock. Chahar is agricultural, but also has iron ore reserves.

In all this region, Japan, during the last few years, been wangling trade advantages in the way of tariffs and concessions. These northern provinces, in which Japan is now trying to foment a secession movement, are relatively progressive for China.

In Shansi, for instance, the only concerted effort at reforestation has been made to combat the barrenness China has brought on herself by destroying her forest cover. Japanese railway lines, with one eye on opening the interior up to trade with the coast and with Manchukuo, and the other on possible war with Russia, would probably be welcomed.

Shantung especially retains traces

The march of Japan on the Asiatic mainland is well shown on this map, which places Japan (in black) and the territories it has either annexed or in which it has gained control (in squares), on top of a map of the United States, both maps on the same scale. The island of Formosa, acquired by Japan in 1895 and lying far south of Japan proper, within 100 miles of the Philippines, can not be shown on this map. Should Japan either acquire, or gain ascendancy in, the five provinces of north China (shaded with slanting lines), it would control an area as big as that from Duluth to El Paso and from Chicago to Salt Lake City, with a population of perhaps 175,000,000 people.

Splitting Up of North China Begun

Parts of Two Provinces Form Separate, Japan-Sponsored State

TUNGCHOW, Hopei Province, China.—(Copyright Associated Press)—Autonomous government for a wide area of North China, embracing 25 counties in Hopei and Chahar provinces, was inaugurated Monday.

Yin Ju-Keng, head of the new government, announced that all five provinces of North China had been invited to join in self-government with the autonomous area, which includes only parts of two provinces.

Declaring that foreign interests can not be jeopardized, Yin said: "I stand for the rescue of China and close harmony with Japan."

Hoover Once There

PEIPING, China.—(AP)—Autonomy was proclaimed Sunday night for a large sector of North China in a sudden coup by Yin Ju-Keng, administrative commissioner of the demilitarized zone.

Yin, who is on the friendliest terms with the Japanese military, announced, the (Rengo) Japanese News Agency reported, that the new government would call itself the "East Hopei Anti-Communist Autonomous Council" and would control 25 counties in Hopei province which are demilitarized under the Tangku truce of 1933 and subsequent agreements.

Besides the 18 counties within the original demilitarized area include seven others, in which there are no large cities. The largest foreign interest in the zone is the Sino-British kailan mine at Chihwangtang, on the northeastern coast of the province, with which Herbert Hoover formerly was identified. Chihwangtang also is the site of the summer camp of the American army detachment at Tientsin.

Yin told Japanese newspaper men: "I stand for the rescue of China and will work in close harmony with Japan."

WASHINGTON.—Word went around in informed circles Monday that President Roosevelt may split up future appropriations for public works and relief into separate funds to avoid disputes over how they are to be spent. It was reported that the president had made a tentative decision on sums he may ask from the next congress for relief purposes. No hint, however, was taken as to the size of either fund.

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Overwhelming opposition to government competition with private enterprise and to government spending without relation to revenue was recorded Monday in a poll by the United States Chamber of Commerce. The chamber made public the results of a poll on these and other questions which it submitted recently to its membership.

MANILA, P. I.—(AP)—National assembly leaders joined in support Monday of a sweeping defense act which, it was indicated, would be the first legislative measure approved by the new Philippine Commonwealth.

Three Hope negroes, Curtis Cooper, Robert Johnson and Daniel E. Jackson, were held in the city jail Monday as suspects in the $200 robbery last Wednesday night of the Lee De Vaughn second-hand store, Front Street.

Chief of Police John W. Ridgill announced the recovery of part of the loot. He said that two or possibly three other arrests would be made before the investigation was complete.

Most of the loot that was recovered included clothing that was located in scattered sections of the city.

Articles taken in the robbery included five automatic pistols, 15 suits, and 15 pairs of shoes. Entrance to the building was gained through a rear door.

Little Interest in Election for City

Only Contests Appear for Aldermanic Posts in Wards Three and Four Little interest was being shown Monday on the eve of Hope's city primary election, set for Tuesday, November 26.

On that date the city will nominate for one aldermanic post in each of the four wards; for city attorney; and for city clerk.

The only opposition will be in Ward Three and Four. In Ward Three, Harvey Barr is opposing Dr. F. D. Henry, incumbent, in the race for alderman.

In Ward Four, Dr. P. B. Carrigan, present alderman, is opposed by C. E. Cassidy.

The candidates are as follows: For City Attorney: W. S. Atkins. For City Clerk: T. R. Billingsley. For Alderman Ward One: E. P. Young.

For Alderman Ward Two: L. A. For Alderman Ward Three: D. F. D. Henry, Harvey Barr. For Alderman Ward Four: Dr. P. B. Carrigan, C. E. Cassidy.

Polling places will be the same as in past years: Ward One—Arkansas Bank & Trust Co. building. Ward Two—Frisco passenger station. Ward Three—556 Filling station. Ward Four—City hall.

Sales Tax Under Fire in Ohio Also

Revolt Against 3 Per Cent Measure Is Coming From Three Directions

COLUMBUS, Ohio.—(AP)—Three forces over the week-end attacked Ohio's 3 per cent general sales tax, source of $38,000,000 in revenue in 42 weeks.

A high tax official immediately rose to defend it against a challenge of its constitutionality in the State Supreme Court, a demand of 4,000 farmers to exempt "necessities of life," and a request of county treasurers for a reduction to 2 per cent.

Carlton S. Dargusch, vice chairman of the State Tax Commission, said the tax "is constitutional, without a doubt."

"But if it isn't," he said, "we can write a new sales tax law which will be constitutional."

The farmers, delegates to the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation convention, adopted a resolution demanding substitution of a net income tax for the sales tax.

Robert S. Billue Murdered; Clues Point to Robbery

Mercantile Firm's Guard Clubbed to Death Early Sunday Morning

DIES AT PRESCOTT

Fingerprints and Two Vest-Buttons Are Officers' Only Clues

Robert S. Billue, 55, veteran night watchman for the Emmet Mercantile company at Emmet, seven miles east of Hope, was slain early Sunday morning by robbers.

Handicapped by meager clues, officers of Hempstead and Nevada counties had made no arrests Monday.

Billue was clubbed to death with his own gun, a double-barrel shotgun which he used in guarding the building. He had been struck several times over the head.

The blows fractured the skull. He died at 11 a. m. Sunday in the Prescott hospital.

Billue was found unconscious about 7 a. m. Sunday by Frank Haltam, employee of the firm. Agonizing groans from within the building attracted attention and when Haltam went inside he found Billue lying in a pool of blood.

A Pierce Struggle

There was evidence of a fierce struggle. Billue's shotgun had been broken at the stock. The barrel was found near the front of the building, believed to have been dropped by the robbers in leaving. The stock was found near Billue.

Rushed to the Prescott hospital, Billue died before reaching consciousness.

Sheriff Jim Bearden of Hempstead county and Sheriff Arlie Pittman of Nevada county, with several deputies, are working on the case. About all the clues they had Monday were fingerprints left on the barrel of the shotgun, and two buttons believed to have been torn from the vest of one of the robbers.

Robbery Motive

Officers believe that robbery was the motive. Billue's shotgun had been fired once, presumably at the robbers. The pellet crashed through the front door of the building. The report awakened residents nearby who reported seeing an automobile driven away from the building shortly after the report of the weapon about 3 a. m. The car went north. There was no investigation at that time.

After the robbers escaped, Billue is believed to have staggered about the building. He apparently went to the rear where he slept and obtained a pistol. The pistol had been snatched

Rosenbaum's Barn Near Fulton Burns

Arson Suspected, But Bloodhounds Lose Trail at Paved Highway

A barn on the C. E. Rosenbaum farm, two miles north of Fulton, burned at daylight Sunday, causing damage of several hundred dollars.

More than 2,000 bales of hay and nearly 1,000 bushels of corn went up in smoke. Several farm implements also were destroyed.

Arson is suspected by officers. Nevada Sheriff Pittman's bloodhounds from Prescott were rushed to the scene. The trail of a man was picked up. It led to a wooded area where the suspected arsonist had mounted a horse.

The tracks of the horse led to paved Highway 67 where the dogs were unable to continue.

The barn was one of the largest in the Fulton area and was located in a meadow by itself. Officers held that no insurance was carried on the building.

The Truth About Diet

By DR. MORRIS FISHER

Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine.

Pancreas Aid in Digestion.

As soon as the food gets out of the stomach, it passes into an organ called the duodenum. This is a Greek word meaning two and ten, because the Greeks figured out that the duodenum was 12 fingers long.

The muscle through which the food passes from the stomach into the duodenum is known as the pylorus. Sometimes in children, this pylorus is contracted at birth, and it is necessary occasionally to operate on a child to get this muscle opened.

Near the stomach and the intestines are also the liver and the gallbladder. In the duodenum, food is mixed with secretions from the pancreas, the liver, the gallbladder, and from the glands of the duodenum itself. From the pancreas there are three ferments. Incidentally, the pancreas is a long, narrow gland lying near the stomach.

Today's Health Question:

Q—Is toothpaste better than toothpowder?

A—Most substances which are used to clean the teeth are made of chalk, sometimes of soap, sometimes of soda. Usually, however, some form of tooth powder can be used to hold the material together. Operation of the toothbrush is the important factor in the use of toothpaste. Any of the widely advertised toothpastes or toothpowders is about as good as any of the others.

The liver and the duodenum. It pours another secretion directly into the blood. This secretion is called insulin. It helps the body to digest sugars. When it is absent, the result is diabetes.

The other ferments developed by the pancreas and poured into the duodenum include trypsin, which acts on the proteins; lipase, which breaks up the fats; and amylase, which digests the starches. This secretion is alkaline, while that from the stomach is acid.

Foods containing starches, which are not completely digested in the stomach are broken up in the duodenum into sugars that can be absorbed. The fats are split up in the duodenum into fatty acids. When they combine with alkaline salts, fatty acids from soaps.

One of the secretions that helps digest fats is the bile, which comes into the duodenum from the liver and the gallbladder. When bile and pancreatic juice are mixed, they digest fats very rapidly.

Secretions from glands of the intestines contain ferments which also aid in preparing food for absorption. Most of the material by which we live and which comes from our food is absorbed into the body in the small intestine.

A Book a Day

By Bruce Catton

Booth Tarkington is out with a new book—"Mr. White, The Red Barn, Hell, and Bridgewater"—and if that title seems a bit long, let me explain that it is not one title, but four.

For this new book is a collection of four short stories, and in them Mr. Tarkington turns his attention to death and what comes after it, musing soberly on the human spirit and the unfathomable mystery of its origin and destination.

That the mystery does not merely hide a hawk wall—that man has a destination beyond the grave, and does not simply cease to exist like a blow-out candle flame—Mr. Tarkington seems confident. And he has used his undeniable talents to discuss the subject in a way both eerie and persuasive.

He shows us, for instance, a dead man returning to warn a bosom friend of the vanity of his earthly desires; a half-mad old recluse playing at being God and providing an analogy for the bemused observer; a busy New Yorker dying and discovering that hell is simply a continuation of his ordinary daily life, lit by a faint gleam of hope at the end of the road; and a regular Pristine Caldwell creation of a chisel-hell client who carries this study to hell even further by demonstrating that eternal damnation can be inside of a man before he dies, so that he must carry it with him forever.

All in all, these are good stories. Doubleday, Doran & Co. is publishing the book at $1.25.

Your Children

By Olive Roberts Barton

Mother is discouraged from allowing a little boy or girl to become too fond of a toy and naturally they wonder what it is all about. Perhaps Teddy won't go to bed without his tattered old doggie or Connie won't part with Raggedy Anne. But along comes some educator who says, "Tut, tut. How terrible! Take away their comforters and let them grow up without substitutions for you, mother, in their lonely hours."

I know all about the dangers of letting the child turn to one thing or one person constantly for escape and sympathy, and the wisdom of cutting under the too emotional life; but yet it seems to me that almost every child I have known loved some toy best, took fire engines and trains to bed with him, or dolls with her, and grew up to be just as normal as anyone else.

Child Is King in Toyland

Now we know that toys can't talk back to children. From the concrete mixer to the jack-in-the-box they are absolutely submissive to the humors and moods of their owner. He feels that he can do to them what others do to him. He even goes a bit further and uses vivisection and decapitation to satisfy a whim.

It all helps to average up his under-dog feeling. No toy dares to say him nay. He is king in toyland and can make the toys do as he wishes. But frequently there is one toy that means more than this. Usually it is an animal or a doll. While he can personify and toy and give it human attributes, the "sympathetic" toy is usually the copy of a living thing.

When he is put to bed he misses the life about him. His mother is gone and it is dark. Then he snuggles down to Tatters or Winkles and he is no longer alone. If he takes a new toy to bed, it is usually from novelty or some association of pleasant events that has given it temporary value.

But what we are speaking of here is the fixation on one favorite, and it is this that the trainers are after.

Substitute Other Interest

Well—children are what they are. Most of them fall into a pattern and one of the things they match up in this taking of toys to bed, as well as keeping the favorite handy through the day. To me, it is a great big question whether or not the need does not outweigh the danger.

What I do advise, however, is for the parent to watch for signs of too abnormal devotion to a fetish. Especially if the child is over six. In such a case, it's well to get it away gradually, not all at once. This is best done by arousing deep interest in something else exciting enough to undermine the other.

When he gets to the stage that Tatters can lie neglected on the shelf, where Billy can see him without emotion, Billy is cured. To dispose of the comforter suddenly is not so good, because a memory can be as much of a fetish as an object or a person. Removal is not cure, if the complex is set.

Glorifying Yourself

By Algia Hart

Some of the very nice Christmas gifts for men can be found right in your favorite cosmetic department.

From modest bottles of after-shaving lotion to pretentious kits containing every item a man needs to care for his skin and hair, such presents are sure to make a hit on Christmas morning.

Remember, of course, that it is just as ridiculous to buy skin preparations for a man about whom you know nothing as to give makeup to a woman you never saw.

If he is an electric razor addict, a box of shaving soap—no matter how good—can't go to mean much in his life. Otherwise, shaving soap in a wooden bowl makes a fine gift. So do various brushes shaving cream.

Don't pick items that are too strongly perfumed. Most men detest them. Stick to light odors that will vanish soon after he gets them on.

If he takes pride in the appearance of his bathroom shelf, handsome bottles to hold mouth wash, lotion and powder are sure to please. Other practical gifts that will dress up his bathroom and make him appreciative of your good judgment are toothbrush, nailbrush and bathbrush sets and all kinds of towels and bathrugs.

Two enormous bath towels (the kind men love), two face towels (these should be Turkish, too), wash cloths and a matching rug in some hand-

To Close Up Gap in Federal Budget

Income Next Year Will Be Brought Within 1/2 Billion of Expenditures

WARM SPRINGS, Ga.—(AP)—A reduction to $500,000,000 in the margin by which government expenditures exceed income during the next year was predicted Sunday by Chairman Buchanan of the house appropriations committee.

Buchanan called on President Roosevelt here Sunday and will go over the budget estimates Monday with him and Budget Director Bell.

Asked how the budget could be brought near to a balance, the Texan replied "by a devil of a fight."

Mr. Roosevelt has given no indication of the budget figures for the next year except to assure the conference of mayors that relief will be continued if necessary to prevent starvation.

The Appropriations Committee chairman said he did not go over the figures Sunday adding that "this is Sunday and we didn't talk shop."

"There are going to be reductions if I can put it through," he said. "I mean reductions all along the line."

Buchanan and his wife were guests at luncheon at the cottage of the president.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Young and lovely DANA WESTBROOK, born and reared abroad, comes to America after the death of her parents to make her home with her grandmother, whom she has never seen.

Years before, Dana's mother eloped, leaving her husband and an infant daughter, NANCY WAL-LACE. After the divorce she had married young Westbrook and a year later their daughter, named Dana for her father, was born.

When Dana reaches the old southern home she is welcomed cordially by her great aunt, MISS ELLIEN CAREW, but is coldly received by her grandmother and half-sister. Dana decides unhesitatingly, "They don't really want me. I shouldn't have come."

MRS. CAMERON shrewdly begins plans to introduce Dana to society, hoping that Dana will marry well. Nancy hides what she believes to be a hopeless love for RONALD MOORE, rich and handsome. When the old Cameron one breaks down in front of his estate, Ronald brings Dana home.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER V

NANCY was sure she would never again be surprised at anything in her whole life. The rigid barriers that had been erected against even the slightest extravagance in the Cameron household were suddenly forgotten in preparation for the coming party. And Nancy, despite her resentment at the reason for it—Dana—would not have been human if she hadn't enjoyed the temporary recklessness with the family funds.

She was going to have a new dress!

Only a day before Nancy had been thinking unhappily, "What'll I wear? That old pink or gaudy, I suppose. I wish it would fall into holes so I'd have to get a new evening dress. I wish I had nerve enough to spill ink down the front of it."

And then there was her grandmother saying, "I suppose both of you girls will need new dresses. I think you Aunt Ellen and I saw the very ones for you. Twin models at Burger-Goodlett's. They are white, which I think is prettiest for young girls. And" (Mrs. Cameron had not completely forgotten her thrifty habits) "you can wear white longer. It is less conspicuous and it can always be dyed."

A Burger-Goodlett frock! Nancy's big eyes widened in amazement. This was something, indeed. Oh, it was going to be grand to appear in something besides that everlasting pink rag, to feel decently dressed for once in one's life.

"When do we go for our fittings?" Nancy asked, her voice husky with emotion.

"Any time you wish. The dresses have been laid aside for you."

Nancy could scarcely wait. She wanted to rush from the room and race to town. But when one is 21 and has spent several years cultivating a pose of indifference it will not do to drop the mask all at once.

"I guess I'll take a nap. I'm awfully sleepy," Nancy snuggled into a quite natural yawn. She went to her room and threw herself across her bed. Impossible to sleep when one was as excited as this, visioning oneself in a long, lovely white formal.

THE house was very quiet and presently Nancy drifted off to sleep while listening to the drone of the humming birds in the red honeysuckle vine. It was 3 o'clock when she awakened.

Now she could leave the house without Grandmother and Aunt Ellen suspecting she was rushing off to see the new dress. With elaborate carelessness, she left the house, swinging a tennis racket.

Perhaps she should have knocked at Dana's door, and asked her to come along for a fitting, too. But that, Nancy felt, would be a weakness. Just because one was going to have a new dress was no reason to turn sentimental and sappy and do things you didn't want to do.

Nancy threw herself across the bed but it was impossible to sleep when she was so excited.

Nancy was quite sure, anyhow, that Dana was sleeping. Everyone in the old house fell into the habit of an afternoon nap because there was nothing else to do to fill the time.

As Nancy backed the Cameron automobile down the drive into the street, a roadster, driven by Marie Norman, swerved quickly, avoiding a collision.

"Lo, Nancy," Marie called. The other girl's response was none too cordial. She halted the car, however, as it was apparent Marie wanted to talk.

"Hello," Nancy said. Marie Norman had always had an irritating effect on her. Marie was always perfectly bland and agreeable, all sweetness and light, but, just the same, she was full of tricks and used them when it suited her purpose, with unscrupulous cunning.

There had been times, too, when Nancy's rapier-like wit had drawn blood at the expense of her slower-witted neighbor. Somehow, Nancy knew that Marie had an abiding dislike for her, behind smiling eyes and slow, indolent voice.

"I'm just back from the club," Marie announced. "Guess who is out there?"

"Too hot for guesswork?"

"Your perfectly knockout sister."

"My sister?" Nancy dropped her eyes for a moment. "Oh—Dana. I'd forgotten she planned to go out this afternoon."

"You should have been there to see the hit she made. Boys swarming around her like bees. Ronnie wasn't any too pleased about it, either. He had that terribly proprietary manner, I suppose, just because he'd brought her out. We bachelorettes haven't a chance. Gosh, Nancy, if I had a sister like that, I'd have kept her across the ocean!"

"Would you?" Nancy queried indifferently. She started the car just then—and for once didn't mind its protesting roar, mixed with a number of rattles. They helped to drown out Marie's prying shot.

"What do I care?" Nancy asked herself furiously, driving blindly for the moment.

THE day had turned gloomy. All the heavy excitement that had sent her on her way to the dress shop was gone.

She thought drearily of Dana, walking into the country club with Ronald Moore, cutting a wide swathe without even trying. It had always been so difficult for Nancy herself. Of course there was always Tommy McNair hanging around with his pale hair and pale eyes that blinked, but that was almost worse than having no one hanging around at all. Tommy was a perennial thorn in Nancy's self-esteem. He was the one delinquent proof of her social failure. For no girl who had anyone else for an escort would ever allow Tommy around.

But if Tommy weren't with you, you wouldn't be there at all. So you went with him, golfed and played tennis vigorously and acted as though you were having a perfectly swell time.

The dress could go hang, Nancy decided. At least for this afternoon it could.

She turned the car at the next corner and headed for home. On the way she passed Scott Stanley and Paula Long. Nancy thought, "More strangers coming to town."

Not, of course, that Scott and Paula were strangers, because both were natives. Scott had been away for years, though. She had heard last week that he had come through medical school with honors and was heading home to begin his practice.

Paula, who had been sickeningly in love with Scott for so long, was the kind of artist who puttered around without ever getting anywhere. With money of her own, she had always managed to be puttering somewhere in Scott's vicinity. Though it hadn't seemed to help her much. Everybody but Scott knew how much Paula cared for him.

Only momentarily diverted by her glimpse of the rather weather-beaten gray roadster and its two occupants, Nancy's thoughts returned to the country club and all the fun and excitement of which Dana was a part. She thought bitterly: "Where was my lucky star when I happened to be born?"

SCOTT had come from the shower rooms and joined Paula at the pool. They were suddenly in the midst of a crowd of young people.

"Well, Scott, old chap, we thought you'd really deserted the old town."

"Glad to see you back, Scott," "Well, Dr. Stanley—Oh, Scott, how does it feel to be a full-fledged—?" And on and on.

Paula, too, was being received with some excitement. "Is it true you had a one-man show at some swank gallery, Paula?"

"Will you invite me over to see some of those etchings you do so cleverly?" Scott's eyes glinted with amusement. He could read Paula's disgust in her veiled eyes.

And then, suddenly, his gaze was concentrating. A girl in a green bathing suit had climbed the ladder and was preparing to take a high dive. She had a lovely, slim figure and a laughing, eager face.

Scott got to his feet and walked toward the diving board, looking up as he walked. His eyes met those of the girl. Hers were a shade of deep green-blue. Perhaps the green tint was responsible for the green tints in her eyes. He couldn't be sure. But he was sure he'd never seen eyes so beautiful before.

Paula joined him. "Who's the girl?" she asked. Her voice sounded queer.

Scott's voice sounded strange also, rough with emotion: "I don't know. But I have an idea she's the girl I'm going to marry."

Grudge Mat Card Here Wednesday

Zaharias Must Throw Two Wrestlers Within 90-Minute Deadline

Chris Zaharias, tough Greek meanie, will take on Bob Montgomery and Billy McEuen in a 90-minute handicap match at the American Legion wrestling arena here Wednesday night.

The match was scheduled here to settle an argument that started last Wednesday night in Little Rock after Zaharias had won over Scotty McNaught for the second time in two weeks.

Zaharias boasted that he could pin Montgomery and another just like him the same night—and that it would take only 90 minutes to do it.

McEuen had just driven in from Hope and arrived in time to accept the proposition. Part of the agreement is that Zaharias will meet McEuen in the first match, win two falls out of three, and then take on Montgomery. Zaharias must pin Montgomery in two falls. All of this must be accomplished in 90 minutes.

As an added feature this week Promoter Bert Mauldin announced that a negro battle royal would open the program. Wednesday's show is sponsored by the American Legion. Courtesy tickets will be good.

Promoter Mauldin, who is demanding better shows for local fans, announced that Owen Davis, whose match was stopped here last week the second round, had been suspended indefinitely by the State Athletic commission.

CARDUI DURING MIDDLE LIFE

While she was going through a change of life, Mrs. Susan Price, of Tallahassee, Fla., was "very weak" and "had to go to bed" many times. "I couldn't sleep well at all. I was always looking for something bad to happen. I read of Cardui and took it. It helped my nerves much and gave me strength and brought me up. I took Cardui off and on two years. . . . I have recommended Cardui to other people, hoping they would be helped and given strength as I was with this good remedy. . . . Thousands of women testify Cardui benefited them. If it does not benefit you, consult a physician."

The many friends of the bridegroom in this city will be interested in the following wedding announcement appearing in a recent issue of the "Truth & Herald" of Winchester, Tenn. "A wedding of much interest was that of Miss Elizabeth Tucker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clint C. Tucker of Winchester, and Wright F. Massey, son of Mrs. Kate Massey of Hope, Ark., which was quietly solemnized, Friday evening, November 8 at 8:30 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents on South High street. A scheme of green and yellow was developed in the living room where a luxury of foliage and yellow chrysanthemums formed an attractive altar before which the ceremony was read by the Rev. R. H. Hudgens of Wart-race. Only relatives and intimate friends of the family were present. Miss Marjorie Sanders presided at the piano, preceding the ceremony she played "Evening Star" by Wagner, and Mrs. Earl Warmbrod sang, "I Love You Truly" and "At Evening." The bride's chorus, from Lohengrin, was used for the precession and Mendelssohn's wedding march for the recession. Liz's "Love Dream" was played softly as the marriage rites were taken. The bride was becomingly attired in an ensemble of black. Her flowers were yellow chrysanthemums.

And of course the opening wider of a market for exports among the nearly 100,000,000 people living in the five provinces is an incentive.

Shuts Out Soviet From the political point of view, the Japanese object is clear. These provinces complete a territorial wedge between China and Russia, and include strategic centers, such as Kalgan, which cut off the land route between China proper and Russia.

They tend to hem in outer Mongolia, in which Russia is playing the same game of "peaceful penetration" that always precedes the Japanese military moves, and to separate it from the Chinese Soviets in Kungsi and Hunan.

But the chances are that markets, coal, iron, and cotton weigh heavier on Japanese minds than political and military advantages.

Last year, for instance, Japan sent four times as much goods to Manchuria as to China proper, and for the first time exported more goods to Manchuria than to the United States.

Similar developments in the five northern provinces is the Japanese aim.

WITH THE LADIES

By Helen Weisheimer

Never marry a man to save him! You can't break his descent to China.

True, he may reform. But if he does, it will be because the suggestion came from within himself and not because you had a bright idea.

Dr. Alfred Adler, noted Viennese psychologist and former associate of Dr. Sigmund Freud, gave this warning to "female saviors" the other day. "Whether a woman wants to save a man from being a loafer, a gambler, from being sick or anything else, the motive is the same—a desire for adoration," Dr. Adler says. "She thinks he would always be grateful and look up to her, but no human being can look up always."

Certainly not! It's hard on the neck muscles. There are moments, plenty of them, when all of us want to drop our heads. Then something sitting on a pedestal passes out of the range of vision. It is all very well to be a man's angel but he wants you to fly down to earth occasionally.

Unappreciated Effort

It requires a lot of effort—needless, unthoughtful effort—to try to reform a man. He won't appreciate it. If you have loved him with a two-days' beard and a striped necktie he will expect your cup of adoration to continue to overflow. If you didn't doubt his love for you when he bestowed a slight token of affection on a hat check girl or a scrub lady, he will wonder why you think a wedding contract has given you a monopoly on the overflow of his charm.

If he loved to quaff a bowl of ale with a few good cronies till the roost was crow for day light and the milk wagon rumbled over the cobblestones he'll not take a glass of milk at eleven-thirty and withdraw until time for his eggs and orange juice.

That is, he won't because you suggest it! He may—but if so, it will be because he has quaffed so many bowls of ale that he has sickened of them; that he has decided life holds other things of more importance (and you may be one of them); that he has glimpsed a better way of living.

Preacher Gets Nowhere

In all seriousness, a woman may play an important part in the change that comes into a man's life. However, she does it by the very nature of her being, not because of any conscious effort to work a transformation. When she preaches and teaches and points out morals she gets nowhere. The chances are that she loses ground. She may be her brother's keeper but she has to act incognito when she tries the role with her husband.

No, if it's a reformation that you want to start, think up a cause. Carrie Nation had temperance and Carrie Chapman Catt used suffrage.

When a woman tells herself that the mere proximity to her own ideals and method of thinking will affect a man she has a chance of being right. If he loves her deeply, he may be influenced. When she tells herself that she can institute a program that will bring him safely into the shelter that he needs, she has nothing but a chance of being wrong.

The Fair Thing to Do

"What you are speaking so loudly I can't hear what you are saying," someone once remarked.

It's a wise statement for wives to remember. Be yourself. Don't imitate a prophet crying aloud in a futile wilderness. You will need all of your sympathy, understanding, tenderness, kindness, and devotion in being the kind of woman that you want to be. If that doesn't make an effective impression on the man who is the here of your theme, you might as well save your words for your next paper at the Woman's Club.

No, if you can't love the man you

CLUB NOTES

Bright Star

The Bright Star Home Demonstration club met at the home of Mrs. John Thompson, November 18th, with Mrs. Earl Thompson presiding. Miss Griffin was devotional leader, reading John 14, followed by prayer. The room was called, and minutes read by the secretary.

There were ten members present, and one visitor, Mrs. Frank Miles of Hope. The club was delighted to have her visit with them.

Cutting patterns for Christmas presents was the demonstration given. The discussion was home improvement, each one telling what they had done this year toward improving their homes.

We also elected the following officers for the new year: President, Mrs. C. B. Boyce; vice president, Mrs. Dalton Boyce; secretary, Mrs. Roy Smith; reporter, Mrs. O. A. McKnight. Let every member bring some one with them to the next meeting, which will be on Saturday, December 7, at the home of Mrs. Walter Tomlin. Each member is expected to bring a small gift to place on a Christmas tree at that time.

Clipper Reaches the Midway Isles

Airline Will Fly 17-Day Steamer Route to Philippines in 5 Days

MIDWAY ISLANDS. — (AP) — (Via Pan-American Airways radio) — The China Clipper brought its air mail through from Honolulu Sunday to these tiny mid-Pacific islands, halfway point on an 8,000-mile route the seaplane is inaugurating between California and Manila. The sleek 25-ton flying boat alighted here at 2:01 p. m. (9:01 p. m., Eastern Standard time) after covering the 1,323 miles from Honolulu in slightly under nine hours, an average of about 147 miles an hour. Twenty-one persons were aboard the sky liner. It also carried 1,700 pounds of mail and supplies for way points. Twelve of those aboard were Pan-American Airways employees bound for island bases along the new ocean air route which extends from Alameda, Calif., to the Philippine capital. Nine men are in the crew.

Clear, sunny weather prevailed for the flight as the China Clipper, weighing 51,000 pounds over all, taxied 4,500 feet before rising from the water at Honolulu against a light breeze. About 500 spectators cheered the takeoff. If the clipper follows her schedule she will fly from Midway to Wake Island Monday, from Wake to Guam Tuesday and from Guam to Manila Wednesday, spanning the 8,000 miles from Alameda, Calif., to the Philippine capital in five days. It takes 17 days by steamer. Capt. E. C. Musick said the 1,700 miles between Guam and Manila, heretofore unflown, would take about 12 hours.

Political Wires Fail Debt-Dodgers

Attempt to Bring Pressure Against HOLC Is Made by Hundreds

WASHINGTON. — (AP) — The Home Owners Loan Corporation disclosed Sunday that "several hundred" borrowers have attempted to apply political pressure to avoid payments on loans.

Officials said about six cases daily are recorded in which borrowers have tried unsuccessfully to enlist the aid of congressional representatives in attempts to circumvent terms of their mortgage. The congressmen and senators, it was said, always check the HOLC to ascertain if there has been any unfairness.

"In every case," one official said, "we have explained the facts and there have been no further kick-backs."

Attempts to ring in politics was said to come largely from "willful delinquents" who refuse to pay when able to do so. These efforts are made when payments are past due and foreclosure is threatened.

Lottery Charge in Suit Club Dropped

Staggs Dismisses Charges Following Discontinuance of Clubs

Lottery charges growing out of operation of suit clubs by Matthew Staggs, W. T. Gorham, R. L. Gosnell and Roy Johnson were dismissed by Deputy Prosecuting Attorney P. T. Staggs in municipal court Monday morning.

Asked for reasons as to dismissal of the cases, Deputy Staggs refused to discuss the matter.

However, it was understood that operation of the clubs has been stopped. Six persons pleaded guilty to drunkenness and were fined $10 each. They are: B. Mouser, Bill Thomas, Cecil Raleigh, Austin Stone, Les Jones and L. L. Sooter.

Three persons forfeited $10 cash bonds for drunkenness and failed to appear for trial. They are: J. Sinclair, Joe Lowthorp and George Blomberg.

Pearl McFaddin, negro, pleaded guilty to charges of concealing stolen property and was fined $25 and sentenced to a day in jail.

James Wright, charged with assault and battery, was fined $5. He was charged with striking Ruth Martin.

Glenn Burns, charged with possessing liquor for purpose of sale, pleaded guilty and was fined $250.

Peg McFaddin, charged with failure to obtain driver's license, pleaded guilty and was fined $5.

Fat Easter was found guilty of possessing illegal liquor and was fined $5. Notice of appeal was given. Bond was fixed at $10.

Judgment of $20 was given Rogers & Rogers, law firm of Texarkana, in a civil suit against M. D. Shell. The plaintiff sued for legal services rendered.

In another civil suit brought by J. L. Anderson against G. H. Wiggins the case ended with dismissal on motion and payment of cost by the plaintiff and a compromise agreement was reached whereby the sale of a bale of cotton would be divided equally between the plaintiff and the defendant.

Labor and Reserve Board See Gains

Recovery in Heavy Industries, Actually Beginning, Says A. F. of L.

WASHINGTON. — (AP) — A business and industrial boom "within the next few years" was predicted Sunday night by the American Federation of Labor.

Its optimistic view of the economic outlook was bolstered by a Federal Reserve Board statement that maintenance of business activity at near the year's peak has been "the outstanding fact in the economic situation during the first 10 months of 1935."

The board said this trend was "in contrast" to the course of the three preceding years when advances "were quickly followed by sharp declines."

The A. F. of L. forecast was coupled with a warning to both capital and labor that another depression would follow the next boom "as surely as night follows day" unless hours were shortened and a great share of industrial earnings went into wage envelopes.

Federal Reserve Board views were given in the regular monthly bulletin which said:

"Industrial activity and employment in the first 10 months of the year have been at a level higher than in any of the four preceding years, and about half way between the lowest point of depression and the 1929 level."

"The volume of unemployment and the need for public relief, however, continue to be large."

The Federation in its monthly business survey noted especially that "with this fall's industrial upturn, business has regained a greater measure of confidence than at any other time since the depression began." It added:

"This fact is of outstanding importance, for, even though we have in the United States resources, equipment and man power enough to give every family a comfortable living, under our present system these resources will not be used, men and women will not be given a chance to work and earn income, until business men are confident that they can make profits."

Major shortages in durable goods such as houses, automobiles, machinery and railroads, equipment, were found by the federation to be setting the heavy industries to work. The Reserve Board too emphasized that production increases were "chiefly in industries producing durable goods."

The board added that the total volume of employment was "slightly higher than a year ago and substantially above the lowest level of the depression." It numbered wage earners employed at factories during September at "about 7,000,000 as compared with a low of 4,900,000 in the spring of 1933 and a high of 9,100,000 in the middle of 1929."

Processing Taxes to Get Decision

U. S. Supreme Court Monday Promises to Consider Validity Issue

WASHINGTON. — (AP) — A ruling on the right of citizens to obtain injunction against processing taxes—the main prop of the administration's farm relief activities—was promised Monday by the United States Supreme Court.

It also granted a request by eight Louisiana rice millers for a temporary injunction against levies until it could pass on the merits of their controversy.

Potato Allotment to Be Made Here

Arkansas Restricted to 910,000 Bushels of Potatoes in 1936

Individual potato sales allotments for the 1936 crop, under the provisions of the potato act, will be made by county committees made up of growers, according to Frank R. Stanley, county agent. The potato act applies to potatoes harvested after December 1, 1935.

Allotments will be made on the basis of the past sales history of the farm and the grower, except in the case of new growers, who may be given allotments from a reserve set aside for this purpose.

After grower applications have been filed, state sales allotments will be apportioned to counties by a state committee of growers and these county allotments will be apportioned to individual growers by the county grower committee.

"The potato act," says J. B. Hutson, division director of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration supervising the potato program, "makes it mandatory that the administration proclaim national and state allotments. These were announced November 1, and the work of determining grower allotments is already under way in some of the early producing states."

Of the national potato sales allotment of 226,600,000 bushels for 1936, announced by the Secretary of Agriculture, Arkansas' share is 910,000 bushels.

It is estimated that 30.7 per cent of the Arkansas crop is sold. This indicates a crop of 2,804,169 bushels, which is 3 per cent above the average crops produced during the years 1926-1932. The national allotment is equal to the average sales of potatoes for the years 1929 to 1933.

In the past, between 64 and 65 per cent of the potato crop has been sold when the national production has approximated the average of recent years and consumption has been near present levels. On this basis, sales of 226,600,000 bushels would be accompanied by a total production of from 350,000,000 to 355,000,000 bushels. Taking into account present and prospective

103 Are Killed in Week-End Crashes

Illinois Leads States With 13, California 12 and Georgia 9

By the Associated Press

At least 103 persons were killed in automobile accidents over the week-end as ice-coated highways of Eastern states for the first time this year. Two deaths in New York city were attributed to icy pavements. The dead were pedestrians struck by skidding cars.

The New York Bureau of Motor Vehicles warned against the hazards of night driving. The bureau said 1,688 persons were killed in New York state during the first nine months of the year, more than half at night.

Illinois led the states in week-end fatalities with 13. California reported 12, four in the traffic rush to the Stanford-California football game. Georgia reported nine dead.

Fatalities in other states: Minnesota, Tennessee, North Carolina, Rhode Island and Colorado, one each; Nebraska, Wisconsin, Washington, Arizona, Idaho, Mississippi and Pennsylvania, two each; Oklahoma and Arkansas, three each; Massachusetts, four each; Kansas, Texas, Michigan and Virginia, five each; New York, seven; Pennsylvania, eight.

5 Bootleg Raids Prove Fruitless

State County and City Officers Shake Down 5 Places Saturday

Five alleged moonshine joints in Hope were raided Saturday by a squad of officers led by Chief of Police John W. Ridgill.

The net result: "Nary a drop."

At some of the places Chief Ridgill quoted the owners as saying: "We used to sell it—but we don't no more."

Participating in the raids, besides Chief Ridgill, were: Deputy Sheriffs E. O. Robins and Reginald Bearden; Revenue Officers Ed. Van Sickle and C. C. Mitchell; and City Patrolman John Turner.

And the county will have to have phenomenal new revenues to meet that expense.

And there is only one sure place to get that revenue—from the sales tax.

Here, then, will be my position as a country editor:

I have told my readers that we ought to have a tax on food and clothes—but the tax upon food and clothes will be used to chase country moonshiners and city bootleggers—the oldest, most charming occupation known to the police.

It's an insult to public intelligence. I don't care how many preachers say otherwise.

The Highly Taxed Motorist Is Blue—and So Is His License!

Designers of 1936 motor vehicle license plates have borrowed heavily from the spectrum, but also have given prominent place to the motorist taxpayer's favorite color—blue!

License plate colors, according to information received by the Arkansas Petroleum Industries Committee, reveal that plates of 30 states and the District of Columbia will have new color combinations. Fifteen states will merely reverse standard color schemes, putting the 1936 text in the color of the 1935 background.

Orange, or yellow, and black, the combination used by nine states, is the most popular, because of high visibility. Blue and white—possibly representing the motorist as feeling blue after being bled white by taxes—will be used by eight states. Black and white stands third, appearing on the plates of seven states.

Tennessee has not as yet selected its 1936 colors, but other states will offer license plates—at about half the annual cost of gasoline taxes—in these colors:

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

By Rodney Dutcher

WASHINGTON.—Naval and diplomatic gossip here is that the naval conference about to be convened in London is a futile gesture and that nothing will come of it but excuses for Japan, England, and the United States to tell their taxpayers that the other nations will not compromise and that the only recourse is to enter the international naval race.

Nevertheless, there is a distinct hope—and it can be said with authority that it persists with the American delegation—that naval limitation can be continued and Japan made to modify her insistence on parity with Great Britain and the United States.

This administration has gone so long on the theory that Japan was bluffing and could be out-bluffed that most of the bystanders have decided the theory was all wet.

The only thing tending to strengthen the first belief as the delegation sails is a hope that all other nations at the conference can be brought into a united front against Japan, thereby persuading her that it would be a good thing to back down for the present from her complete denunciation of the Washington and London treaties.

Britain Changes Policy

Hope to slow up Japan rests primarily on the fact that Britain and America will have a more sympathetic understanding together than at any previous international conference. Until rather recently the British have followed their long-standing tradition and sought to play off the Americans and Japanese against each other.

Lately, however, according to diplomatic insiders the British have been developing a wholesome fear of Japan and a belief that Japanese aggression will sooner or later lead to a British-Japanese clash in the Far East.

This time it is expected the British and the Americans will work together to head off a gigantic naval race and will try to get other nations—not only those attending the conference—to join them.

Japan wants a 5-5-5 ship parity because she expects to rank equally as a first-class power with England and America after she spreads her sphere of influence through further Chinese territory and because she wants to be sure of being able to hold and protect all she takes.

Japan Safe From Attack

Every naval expert knows that neither the British nor the American fleet could successfully attack Japan, even with the 5-5-3 ratio prevailing. The Japanese islands are so far away and easy to protect that American naval officers view the thought of war on Nippon with actual horror.

It is even very doubtful whether the combined British and American fleets could successfully beat the Japanese at this time on their home grounds.

And the idea of any such attempts now is preposterous. "The European situation requires England to keep much of her strength in European waters. To move the bulk of it into the Pacific would be to expose the British Isles and the vital Mediterranean-Egyptian-Suez Canal line to India."

One Club Over Nippon

The one punitive measure which could bring Japan to her knees, in the opinion of officials here, would be an economic embargo. Japan has recently observed that nations of the world are able to combine in such a step. She would not like to be the victim of one.

These are some of the facts that arise in the minds of Americans participating in the naval conference as they dare hope for something better than a free-for-all naval race.

But each of the delegates knows that the European situation is so complicated, so delicate, and so unpredictable that they're embarking on no more than a gamble.

And the pessimists they leave behind as they quit these shores suggests that theirs is not much more than a gambler's chance.

Hot Springs Ready

early in the season by close decision defeats, the Turkey day game here will be for a sort of "consolation prize." In late season games both heretofore unbeaten in the state over a period of two years, The Bobcats lost to Camden by a 6 to 0 score early in the season, while Hot Springs beat Camden, 7 to 6. Since their last defeats, however, both the Bobcats and Trojans have gained in form and strength.

Featuring a shifty halfback, Cargile, Hope will present a deceptive attack formulated from the crafty brain of the veteran Foy Hammons. They use the "flanger back" formation from which deceptive plays and laterals may be run in profusion. Captain Holly, center; Turner and Reese, ends, and Stone, a guard, are the chief threats on the Bobcat squad along with Cargile.

The Trojans, improving with every game, will be without the services of Frank Petty, stellar end. Petty suffered a fractured and sprained ankle in the Fort Smith game and is out for the season. Paul Pittman, captain and tackle, also injured at Fort Smith, will be in the lineup, however.

With Paul Longinotti back in possession form again and the Trojan backs and ends showing a new adeptness and snaring the little Italian's aerial heaves, the Trojans will more than likely take to the air as they did against Fort Smith to win.

The game will start at 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon.

In speaking of the Thanksgiving Day game, Coach Moving Perry declared that although he was reluctant to schedule a day game here or a Thanksgiving Day game, he expects a good crowd.

"I scheduled this game last fall because of the insistence of local business and professional men," Coach Perry said. "I made every effort to get the strongest team possible for the date and had much difficulty because of the many traditional games played on Turkey day. However, in Hope I believe we will see a team comparable to any in the state."

Hoover and Borah May Split G. O. P.

Borah's Independence a Constant Thorn in Republican Party's Side

By BYRON PRICE
Chief Of Bureau, The Associated Press, Washington.

With both Mr. Hoover and Mr. Borah talking more and more like presidential candidates, the Republican party obviously is headed toward a conflict of serious proportions.

No one can tell how far it will continue along that pathway. Often in the past the party has been able to compromise serious internal differences, and achieve finally a fairly united front. Volunteer peacekeepers, recognizing the present danger, are seeking a solution. Perhaps they will find one.

The only possible way to look at politics intelligently, however, is to consider the facts as they exist at the moment, not on the basis of hypothetical situations which may or may not develop in the future. The facts are quite plain.

Mr. Hoover, whether he runs or not, is determined the party shall not come under the control of that school of thought which is symbolized by Mr. Borah. Whether he runs or not, Mr. Borah is determined that the party leadership of which Mr. Hoover is so conspicuous a part shall be supplanted.

There is a clear-cut issue, entirely aside from any question of possible candidates. It is the sort of issue, furthermore, which has to do with fundamentals, and is difficult to compromise.

Example Of Issues
There is no mystery why compromise would be most distasteful to Mr. Hoover and the party leaders with whom he has been associated.

From an organization viewpoint Mr. Borah's independence of the constituted Republican leadership has been a source of irritation and exasperation for years.

On the side of issues (to take a single example), Mr. Hoover looks on orthodox money as an absolutely indispensable requisite to sound government, while Mr. Borah favors "reflexion."

How can a basic issue such as that be compromised? Mr. Hoover naturally hopes for some measure of vindication, and he knows that is not any part of the plans of the western independent.

On his side, too, Mr. Borah has his reasons. He has said, in effect, that only by purging itself of the old leadership can the party accomplish its destiny.

More significant still is the fact that Mr. Borah does not believe in compromising. He has said on many occasions that no great issue ever was settled by compromise. His rugged personal independence argues more strongly than any other factor against the likelihood of such a solution.

Other Reasons Possible
There is a widespread belief that if either Mr. Hoover or Mr. Borah eventually is drawn into an active presidential candidacy, it will be against his better judgment.

It is hardly possible that either minimizes the obstacles which stand between him and the nomination. Against each there exists within the party a considerable body of bitterly adverse opinion which might foment an open break in the national convention.

Considering this, it is entirely credible that both Mr. Hoover and Mr. Borah have set out on their present activities without thought of becoming candidates — Mr. Hoover seeking primarily to have a major part in the selection of some other candidate, Mr. Borah determined that no such thing shall happen.

But can either hope to gather behind him the needed strength, unless he does become a candidate? And whether or not they run, is there any peacekeeper sufficiently strong to prevent such a collision as will rock the party to its foundation?

For no one who knows politics speaks lightly of the potential power of either Mr. Hoover or Mr. Borah under the existing circumstances.

Sanctions Hit Yuletide
PARIS — (P) — Candied chestnuts, those Yuletide delicacies with which so many Frenchmen discharge a year's social obligations, may be victims of sanctions against Italy.

There are plenty of chestnuts grown in France, but only those from Naples pass through the process of manufacture without falling to pieces.

With no alternative supply in sight, makers of the famous "marons glacés" are refusing to take orders for Christmas delivery.

Cedar rust is a parasite of the cedars, but, due to its peculiar life cycle, it will die out unless there are trees of the apple family nearby, where its spores can alight and develop enough each alternate year.

Andrew Carnegie Born 100 Years Ago

Scotch Birthplace Commemorates American on
This Monday

DUNFERMLINE, Scotland—(P)—In this ancient Scotch burg, where Andrew Carnegie dreamed as a boy of fame and success, the centenary of the birth of the world-known benefactor is being observed November 25.

The 40,000 residents of Dunfermline have had no opportunity to forget the name of Carnegie. Every citizen has benefited in some way from Carnegie money. Every other street reveals some gift which the famous millionaire made to his beloved birthplace.

Cottage Still Stands
Dunfermline today boasts of swimming pools, libraries, gymnasiums, technical schools. It has the most famous public park in Scotland. All are gifts of the man who went from humble poverty to great wealth.

The cottage where Carnegie was born still stands, a squat gray stone affair, with dormer windows jutting out from a quaint old-tiled roof. The attic room where he slept as a child is in virtually its original condition.

Visitors from all parts of the world have inspected the room, with its low, sloping ceiling, and the old-fashioned bed built into a recess in the wall. Some of the original furniture, sober in appearance and solid, remains.

Annual Picnic Held
One of the first sights to attract Carnegie as a boy was the Dunfermline Abbey, founded in the Eleventh century by Malcolm Canmore, and the burial place of Robert the Bruce, whose name is emblazoned on the tower. The curfew bell which tolled—and it still does—was the signal, at eight o'clock, for young Carnegie to go to bed.

Close by the Abbey was Pittencrieff Glen, a large estate which was bequeathed to Carnegie and his companions, no matter how much they wanted to wander through the dark wooded glen. Later, as a multi-millionaire, Carnegie bought the estate. It is now a park where thousands of school children are entertained yearly at a picnic which costs $5,000.

In direct contrast to the evidences of Carnegie's boyhood is the modern "Treasure House," adjoining his early home. Rulers, statemen and corporate bodies throughout the world have contributed to the contents of the house. Gold and silver caskets from cities and towns, resplendent robes from the universities of Europe and America, and brilliantly illuminated scrolls, are assembled in tribute to the one-time bobbin boy.

Letter From Menelik
Among the records of appreciation is a parchment in strange characters; a letter from the late King of Kings, Menelik Second of Ethiopia. It reads as follows:

"He who has conquered the Lion of the Tribe of Judah, Menelik II, King of Kings, Emperor of Ethiopia, 'To Mr. Andrew Carnegie, 'Peace be with you. 'Mr. Ellis has kindly told me of your nobleness and generosity to all people, and of your gift to the African Americans of the United States and your aid to them in gaining a higher sphere of civilization, knowledge, virtue and morality, and educating them on higher planes, and for which I am greatly interested in and thankful, and may God give you power and strength to fulfill all your good wishes. 'Peace be with you. Done in Addis Ababa, Nov. 17, 1933."

Ex-Wives Loyal to Clark Gable
Second Wife May Join
First One as Booster, Despite Estrangement

By ROBBIN COONS
Associated Press Correspondent
HOLLYWOOD—The first Mrs. Clark Gable still calls the movie hero a "charming" boy, and friends say the second Mrs. Gable, from whom he is estranged, probably also will continue a Gable booster.

Gable's senior by 11 years, according to their application for a marriage license in 1931, the second Mrs. Gable occupied with aloofness and dignity for these four years and difficult position of wife to the screen's most idolized male. More so than is usually the case, Mrs. Gable remained in the background of her husband's career, although frequently appearing with him at movieland functions.

Almost Unnoticed
The same year that Gable was divorced from his first wife, Josephine Dillon, now a teacher of dramatics in Hollywood, he married Ria Langham, the mother of two children by a previous marriage.

The ceremony, in Santa Ana, Calif., attracted little attention, for Gable then was only another actor who had done a part or two in the talkies, and was just beginning to make the pictures that were to catapult him into virtual overnight prominence.

The rewards—although Gable considered them the penalties—of movie fame were not long in coming. A visit to New York convinced him that hunting in the mountains hereabouts would be safer and pleasanter, what with mobs of girls caring at him for autographs and souvenirs wherever he went, besieging him at his hotel, and making his progress through the streets a struggle.

Gossipers There First
Hollywood gossip long since predicted the Gable marriage would not last, and gossipers were surprised that it continued in spite of their predictions. Gable, the "man's man" type of actor, answered the rumors by vetoing all suggested interviews about his marriage, while Mrs. Gable, for her part, stressed her background role and rarely talked on the subject which most piqued the interest of the movie magazines.

Mrs. Gable frequently accompanied her husband on the hunting trips which constituted his favorite vacation, but when he flew off on a pleasure tour of South America she did not go—and Gable ran the gauntlet of his Latin admirers alone.

This, of course, was a positive tip-off to the gossips that all was not well at home, and the tongues were flying these many weeks with forecasts of a divorce.

Barley In Arctic
MOSCOW —(P)—Hardy Ethiopian barley is now grown successfully in the far north.

Experiments with samples brought from Africa by a scientific expedition led to wide scale sowing on the Kola peninsula, well inside the Arctic circle.

The Ethiopian variety competes with the best local barleys, government experts reported.

Chicago's Gunmen From Out of Town

Most of the Bad Men Are Visitors From Smaller
Cities and Towns

CHICAGO—(P)—It's the visiting gunman—not the native son—that gives Chicago police their greatest worry in warring against illegal fire-arms.

The detective bureau announces that approximately two-thirds of those arrested for illegal gun carrying during the first 10 months of the current year came to Chicago from other cities and towns.

Arrests for the period totaled 785, of whom only 284 were born in Chicago. Police took 805 guns from those arrested and discovered that 20 were wanted for murder, 164 for robbery, 115 for assault, three for manslaughter, 23 for burglaries, 15 for larceny, one for extortion, and six for statutory charges.

During the first ten months of 1934 police nabbed 937 gun toters and seized 1,101 weapons.

Earthquake City Is Fully Rebuilt

Yokohama, Rising From Ashes, Leads Japanese
Building Boom

YOKOHAMA, Japan —(P)—Yokohama, the city that was 98 per cent destroyed by earthquake and fire 12 years ago, has been rebuilt into a modern and flourishing seaport of more than 700,000 population.

A preliminary count of the national census of October 1 shows Yokohama's population to be more than 702,000. Before the 1923 disaster the city had less than 500,000.

The census shows this port continuing as the empire's sixth city. Tokyo, approaching 6,000,000, comes first, followed by Osaka, in the 3,000,000 class. Nagoya and Kyoto have entered the 1,000,000 population class, and Kobe, seaport of the west, is close to the million mark.

Newspaperman Is Greatest Traveler

Robert H. Davis Has Covered 700,000 Miles for New York Sun

By JOHN SELBY
Associated Press Correspondent

NEW YORK—(P)—The unmistakable flavor of boyhood, the flavor that makes Huck Finn and Tom Sawyer live through war and famine, has been captured again.

The new boy is named Tree Toad, although he is known more formally as Robert H. Davis of the New York Sun, probably the most widely traveled newspaper man in the world. The total is 700,000 miles, and man is known the world over as author, editor and raconteur. Tree Toad is "Bob" Davis himself, 60 years ago.

The very young Bob Davis became Tree Toad one afternoon when the sickle pears were ripe in Nebraska, he explains in "Tree Toad," just published. It began when the young man's mother stepped out on the porch, a bright green toad dropped into her lap, and she explained the mysteries of protective coloring in nature.

Invincible Bob!

Brother William, a year or so older than Bob, waited until kitchen duties called Mrs. Davis inside. Then he informed Bob that he had "a great idea." And Bob followed him under the porch. When he emerged a short time later he had been stripped, painted a beautiful green even to his eyelids, and persuaded that he was actually invisible.

Brother Bill pointed to the sickle pear tree. "Go and help yourself... climb up and eat your fill... no one can see you cannot be seen... God is taking care of you... bring some back to me, ripe ones."

On the way to the tree Bob indulged one desire he had had for a long time—he thumbed his nose at his father, who was an Episcopal clergyman. Mr. Davis did not notice, which proved that the green-painted boy really was invisible. He climbed into the tree.

Father Could See

Once there Bob decided to hiss his

This Man Reviews U. S. Living Costs

Dr. Walton H. Hamilton's Job Is to Protect Consumers' Interests

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Dr. Walton H. Hamilton, the President's adviser on consumer problems, is Washington's new "mystery man."

He has been a special presidential adviser since June 30, but only since the arrival on Washington desks of a pamphlet called "The Consumer," edited in his division, has the fickle Washington spotlight turned to him. It does so just as rumbles of discontent over the rising price of bread reach the capital.

Commentators examine two facts and wonder: the rising cost of living, and the direct entre to the White House granted Hamilton whose particular worry is the rising cost of living.

Staff Gathers Facts

His program includes these objectives: inquires into prices where "trouble spots" keep the product out of the consumers' reach; education of the public to use quality standards and to ask for grade labeling advice to people buying co-operatively; and expansion of consumers' councils.

For some time Hamilton's staff of six economists has been gathering facts about key industries: women's dresses, shoes, tires, autos, ice and paper. When the surveys are done the facts will be made available to manufacturers and the people who buy from them.

Hamilton believes in making facts public. He wonders, for instance, how many men who start factories to make women's dresses know the average life of such a plant is only three years.

He grins over the industry doddering along with machines which are 30 years old on the average. He thinks they could sell more at lower prices if they had kept up-to-date.

"Just An Adviser"

But, he points out, he has no power to go in and say, "You're gathering moss. Junk it." He is just an adviser. But he believes in advice.

"NRA, goodness knows made enough mistakes," he says, "but it did make business men think in larger terms; about whole industries instead of single plants."

He grins at the cynical suggestion that facts may not force the inefficient manufacturer to change his routine.

"You'd be surprised how many business men are intellectually curious enough to give us help," he says.

"This week two of the largest organizations in the country offered us the free use of their books. We will study one set to find out the average wage-earner's credit and how he uses it."

Son Builds Boats

Hamilton can't remember when he started being an economist, but he has studied the subject in four colleges, and taught it in six. He is on leave from Yale university now, and the smell of autumn on the air makes him a little homesick for New Haven where his wife still maintains their home.

The Hamiltons have three children, but it's Edward they grin about. He turned up his nose at the suggestion of college; and all this in the face of his father's degrees. Edward wants to build boats; so he's building boats. Presidential Advisor Hamilton says there was nothing he could do about it, and that the boy may be right.

Thief Dazzled By Sun

BMDAPOST.—(P)—Nature gave 28-year-old Ferenc Kiss the grandest equipment for his job. He is, police charged, a burglar—and a good one because abnormal eyes enable him to see at night.

Pupils of his eyes are greatly distended. Tests at police headquarters revealed he was able to read a newspaper in a room so gloomy it was difficult for an officer to find his hat.

But Kiss found his abnormality no blessing. He was dazzled by day and it was hard for him to work at ordinary employment.

So, he confessed, he became the "cat-eyed" burglar who gave the police trouble until arrested while trying, with great trepidation, to cross a brightly lighted street.

Has 300 Elephants But in Miniature

Tulsa Oil Man Acquires
Collection of Small
Desk Ornaments

TULSA, Okla.—(P)—Elephants—big ones, little ones, hosts of them—are beginning to worry G. B. Ames, Tulsa oil man.

The elephant invasion started less than a year ago. His secretary gave him an elephant to place on a what-not. Another worker in the office thought the elephant looked nice and gave him another. Since then he has received an elephant almost every day, and now has nearly 300.

The collection includes miniature elephants made of a variety of materials and many from foreign countries.

Government Keeps Hand on U.S. Pulse

Press Intelligence Service
Constantly Scanning
the Newspapers

By HERBERT PLUMMER
Associated Press Correspondent

WASHINGTON—Tucked away in one of the vast corridors of the department of commerce building is a mystery unit of the "new deal" about which the general public knows scarcely anything, but an agency of tremendous importance to new dealers themselves.

It is the Press Intelligence Service—one of the largest government-sponsored newspaper clipping bureaus in the world.

Louis Howe, the President's secretary, is credited with originating the idea. First set up as a part of NRA, Press Intelligence Service since the demise of the Blue Eagle has been supported by the National Emergency Council.

More than 50 trained newspaper men and women daily pore over some 400 newspapers from all parts of the country in an effort to keep government officials informed as to the country's reaction to the policies pursued in Washington.

Reactions Digested

Every morning there is placed on the desks of 400 high government officials mimeographed bulletins enabling each to tell at a glance what the reaction of the country's press is toward the policies he announced two days before.

A telegraphic style is employed in the bulletins. Digesting a story, for example, of the government ending direct relief, the bulletin will say—"Mayor B... condemns end of dole." A short summary is included along with the name of the publication and its date.

Press Intelligence is even more efficient. Suppose Secretary Wallace desires to know the reaction of a particular section of the country to one of AAA's production control programs. He calls Press Intelligence.

Immediately all the routine clipping ceases and a well-organized corps of news hunters begins snipping through all the newspapers in the locality of concern to the secretary. Within a few hours there is placed in his hands the information he desires.

Racks of News

The working quarters of Press Intelligence are cluttered with old newspapers and clippings. Racks reaching to the ceiling contain nothing but the news of day before yesterday. Other racks contain nothing but cartoons filled with the news of two days before yesterday.

One group of men does nothing but digest editorials. Another condenses news stories and turns them into headlines. Others do nothing but clip.

On the floor above, a battery of typewriters clicks out the pages which tomorrow are read by the President and his executive officers. Mimeograph machines whirl out hundreds of copies of the bulletins. Messengers scurry over town to deliver the views of the press to the officials who made the news.

Press Intelligence prefers to remain unseen and unknown. Although it has been in existence for more than two years, a mere handful of people in Washington are aware of its existence.

Education to fit individual ability is urged.

Criticism of Duce Arouses Austrians

Vienna City Official's Remarks Directed at Italian Dictator

By ROBERT F. SCHILDBACH
Associated Press Correspondent

VIENNA—(P)—Ernst Carl Winter, vice-burgomaster of Vienna and fearless commentator on political matters, embarrassed the federal government by writing publicly that "the Italian adventure in Ethiopia is highly unpopular in Austria."

This frank expression was so critical of an arbitrary regime which has allied itself closely with Italy that police promptly confiscated the little magazine in which Winter had aired his view.

Winter was appointed to his post by the late Chancellor Dollfuss, who told him to bring about a reconciliation between former socialist workers and the government. He has been attempting to pacify the socialists, but his political independence frequently has caused uneasiness at the chancellery.

"The Ethiopian policy of Italy," Winter wrote, "has created a wide gap between England and Italy, which shows that despite Stresa, the irrational element in Italian fascism is still prevalent."

"Italian fascism, for the sake of a colonial adventure behind which the prestige of a single person stands, does not hesitate to put the peace of Europe at stake."

Says Duce Ignores History

"After due consideration of all political, military and economic aspects, the Italian adventure must be regarded as absurd. Mussolini today, takes the same attitude towards Ethiopia which England took towards Transvaal, or France towards Morocco, without, however, remembering that half a century has gone by and that many a thing has happened in the meantime."

"It is a dangerous play which 'Il Duce' has made and it may end in catastrophe for his regime if his plans fail to be realized."

Considering Austria's situation from the point of view that the League of Nations decided on economic sanctions which may gradually turn to military sanctions, Winter came to the conclusion that there is no other possibility for Austria "but to stand solidly, with both feet, and without restrictions, in the League of Nations' front."

"What ever may happen, to fascist Italy goes the sad story of having started a new war which may develop into a second world war."

Nazis Also Denounce Italy

"Italy again is driven by the same insatiable ambition which drove the then nationalist Italy into the world war after it had safely determined the winning side, and which also induced the same Italy to counteract the peace feelers extended towards France by the Austrian Emperor Charles through the mediation of Prince Sixtus of Bourbon."

Another rebuke for the government's pro-Italian policy came from the outlawed but still active Austrian Nazis. In a pamphlet, distributed in Vienna and throughout the provinces, the Austrian Hitlerites condemned the Italian policy towards Ethiopia.

"Italian troops, in the midst of peace have crossed the frontiers of another member of the League of Nations," the pamphlets stated.

Georgia Children to Eat With F. D.

And There's Excitement
Aplenty in Warm Springs,
Thanksgiving

By E. K. BUTLER
Associated Press Correspondent

WARM SPRINGS, Ga.—(P)—"Say, Mr. President, please pass me some more turkey."

That's what young Billy Prenosil of New York city wants to say if he is fortunate enough again this year to sit at the table with the nation's chief executive at the annual Thanksgiving dinner of the Georgia Warm Springs Foundation.

Last year Billy was too excited and a bit too timid to speak out when the sat down to eat. And anyway, he was too full. But he's planning ahead this year along with other patients for the annual event and he thinks it would be a big thrill to ask the President to hand him a second helping.

And what a thrill these boys and girls who are fighting the aftereffects of infantile paralysis get out of the annual Thanksgiving visit of President Roosevelt!

Too Excited To Talk

"Last year I was so excited I couldn't even move or talk," said Barbara Bodsky, 11, of Newark, N. J., and Barbara's eyes fairly glowed when she told about it even if she was in bed with a cold.

But you can't guess what gave Peter Woodbury, 9, of Bedford, N. H., his biggest moment while eating with the President and Mrs. Roosevelt. His ice cream was frozen too solid and it slid off his plate when he attempted to dip his spoon into it. "Mrs. Roosevelt helped me get it back," said Peter, "and was I thrilled over that."

Little Virginia Bragg of Nashville, Tenn., is eagerly looking forward to Mr. Roosevelt's visit again this year. She couldn't name any one outstanding thing about his trip last Thanksgiving, because, she said, "It was just one big thrill for me."

"This year though," Virginia added, "I'm going to get his autograph. I missed out on it last time."

Secret Service Outwitted
Speaking of getting autographs, that's one of the best things the Warm Springs patients do. Billy Prenosil outwitted the Secret Service last Thanksgiving to get President Roosevelt's. At least, that's what he says.

"When President Roosevelt drove up to Georgia Hall in his car, I started to get him to sign my book," related Billy. "One of the secret service men stopped me, but I told him the President was calling him. When he turned around to see, I pushed over to the President and he signed for me before the Secret Service man knew it."

The Thanksgiving program arranged for President Roosevelt this year will be simple and informal. The dinner will include traditional turkey, pumpkin pie and plum pudding. The large Georgia Hall dining room, at one end of which will sit the President, will be decorated with autumn leaves. The lucky patients who will sit at Mr. Roosevelt's table will be chosen by lot.

A Smile On Every Face

After the patients are seated there's a dead silence as the arrival of the President is expectedly awaited.

The moment the door opens, there's a smile on every face and a "breaks out." A jovial greeting from Mr. Roosevelt and a few minutes later the feast is on. There's a "cheer" in every eye as he starts carving. And from then on there's not a moment as the President smiles at those within earshot telling how he's relating his experiences.

Prince's Tutor Is Fired as Economy

Ethiopian Heir's Schooling Cut Off in Emergency of War Expense

PARIS, France.—(AP)—Prince Makonnen, 17-year-old heir to Ethiopia's throne, will be unable to continue his schooling until the war is over because his father cannot afford it, says his tutor, Captain Fuchs Cigli.

The emperor said he had to reduce household expenses, said Captain Cigli, a retired French naval officer who spent 18 months at Addis Ababa teaching the prince history, foreign literature, French, fencing and boxing, and even the meaning of various religious.

Emperor Advises 'Vacation'

The emperor advised his wife and me to take advantage of the one year vacation clause provided in our contract and leave Abyssinia before hostilities broke out, he said.

This was two weeks before Mussolini's legions crossed the Eritrean frontier.

Prince Makonnen lived with the frontier. The Cigli then returned to Cigli. The captain found his charge an apt and lively student.

Bay Prince Good Boxer

"He excelled in mathematics and showed skill as a fencer and boxer," he said. "He would listen for hours to stories of Napoleon."

"Movies developed his spirit of adventure, a taste for danger and a desire to become a hero," said the French schoolmaster. "Ben Hur" was his favorite film.

Daily Schedule Rigid

"Makonnen would rise punctually every morning at 7:30. At eight he would breakfast, save on fast days prescribed in the Coptic religion. At nine he would take a walk and return in time for his French lesson between 9:30 and 11. Between 11 and 12, he would box, fence or shoot."

"After luncheon he would amuse himself planting or tending flowers. Then from 2 to 3:30, he would take another French lesson, while from 3:30 to 4:30 he would study Amharic, official court language of Ethiopia.

"At 4:30 he had tea. At 5 dressed in his princely garments, he would attend the royal court receptions. His bath was prepared at 6. Dinner took place at 7.

"After dinner was playtime until 9 which hour was devoted to physical culture. Ten o'clock was bed time."

Japanese Wish to Soothe Neighbors

High Diplomat Denies Un- friendly Intentions in South Pacific

By GLENN BABB
Associated Press Correspondent

TOKYO, Japan.—(AP)—Japan's southern island neighbors, the Philippines and Dutch East Indies, are afraid they lie in the pathway of a Japanese program of southward expansion, said Katsuji Debuchi, former ambassador to Washington, on his return from an official tour of the South Seas.

The retired and jovial diplomat who held the Washington post from 1928 to 1933, and tried to make the United States take a sympathetic view of Japanese expansion on the continent, was on a "goodwill mission" to the Philippines, New Zealand, Australia and the Dutch Indies.

Calls Leaders 'Deceived'

He told the Japanese press that leaders in the new Philippines commonwealth and in the Dutch colonies "labor under certain delusions with regard to Japan's policy of advance in the southern Pacific."

"An exaggerated view of our expansion in the southern seas prevails in the Philippines and the islands controlled by Holland," he said, adding, "Misunderstandings seemed to prevail," and implying that Japan has no intention of harming her neighbors in the course of her rise to dominance in the eastern ocean.

I Australia and New Zealand, Debuchi said he found friendliness toward Japan, with "all former misunderstandings arising from our Manchurian policy dissolving."

Philippines Need Markets

Debuchi, who visited Manila in August, emphasized that Japan in her relations with the Philippines through the next 10 years, must avoid causing uneasiness or affront to the still sovereign United States.

"Japan's relations with the islands during the commonwealth period must take full cognizance of American opinion, and the three nations must cooperate along lines of mutual concession," he said.

"It must be admitted, however, that after independence the Philippines, which hitherto have found the chief outlet for their products in the United States, must seek other markets. Economic difficulties probably will beset the future of the independent Philippine state."

Selassie Is Not a Usurper, Tutor Says

French Doctor Tells Inside Story of Ethiopian Royal Family

By CHARLES FOLTZ
Associated Press

PARIS.—(AP)—Emperor Haile Selassie's right to the imperial crown of Ethiopia is backed by a Parisian doctor who taught the king of kings how to speak and read French.

Doctor Vitalien, for seven years personal physician and advisor to Menelik II, backs his testimony with a photograph showing Haile Selassie sitting at Menelik's right hand during a court function.

"Menelik always intended the throne to go to Haile Selassie, his grandnephew, instead of his grandson, Lij Yasu," Dr. Vitalien said. "He knew Lij Yasu was unfit for the throne and while I sat by his deathbed his friends were burying the imperial crown."

Uncrowned Emperor Unfit

"Lij Yasu, although he reigned for three years, never was crowned. When I left Ethiopia a year after Menelik's death at the work Menelik had done was crumbling under Yasu's misrule."

Lij Yasu was deposed by public proclamation in 1916 when Zauditu, daughter of Menelik, was proclaimed empress and Haile Selassie, then Ras Tafari of Shoa, was named regent and heir to the throne.

Dr. Vitalien sailed for Djibouti from Marseille in 1896, but before he arrived in the French port word of his coming had reached Menelik II. Menelik, the first Ethiopian ruler to attempt to modernize his domain, had little faith in the incantations of native doctors and sent Vitalien an imperial invitation.

Seven Years in Palace

The French doctor accepted and lived for seven years in the imperial palace, acting as personal physician and advisor to Menelik.

"When I first knew little Tafari," said the doctor, explaining that "Tafari" was Haile Selassie's familiar name in the palace, "he was scarcely three years old."

"After he had learned Amharic from his native teachers the emperor turned him over to me and I taught him to read and write French. When I left he was almost bi-lingual and I heard he speaks well even now."

State Marketing Plan for Georgia

8 Outlets for Farm Produce to Be Conducted on Non-Profit Basis

ATLANTA, Ga.—(AP)—For the first time in the United States, a system of state farm markets under the complete control of the commissioner of agriculture will begin operation in Georgia January 1, 1936.

Eight markets are being set up in key cities of the state to provide an outlet for farm produce. Three of these are ready for operation and work is underway on most of the others, but the entire system will not be doing business before the first of next year.

Under a bill passed by the last legislature, Commissioner of Agriculture Tom Linder will assess fees and commissions for the markets' use by the farmers, and he will be in general command of the system. The bill empowers him even to place embargos on produce from other states if necessary to protect the Georgia market.

No money was provided to organize the system, however. In most instances the cities and counties are co-operating to provide land for the markets and labor to clear the market sites. They are also financing the erection of necessary buildings and sheds on the market property.

Plan Is Fought

The income of Georgia farmers is expected to be increased greatly by this plan providing them with good market facilities where the buyer and seller can meet. Placed in the various sections of the state, the markets should increase the consumption of Georgia-raised products. The markets are being erected in Atlanta, Macon, Thomasville, Valdosta, Douglas, Gainesville, Cartersville and Glennville.

A suit to prevent the erection of the markets was filed against Linder recently by operators of the Washington street public market in Atlanta. It attacked the constitutionality of the market act passed by the legislature on the grounds that it violates the constitutional mandate against the state of Georgia going into business.

"The state should not go into business for profit," Linder agreed, "and we are not going to operate these markets for a profit. They will be non-profit organizations for the mutual benefit of the farmer and the buyer, providing the buyer with good profit from his labors. Only enough fees will be collected to operate the markets."

"Farmers For It"

"The state is in business in a sense in a lot of things. State owned colleges compete with private schools; state operated asylums compete with private asylums, and the state bureau of markets competes with private business. Practically all Georgia farmers are for this plan of marketing. The only objection so far has come from those on the Atlanta public market."

Georgia farmers work all year and do not have time to plan for marketing their products, Linder said. So they follow a haphazard plan, not knowing where to market their products, and not being able to receive a good price for their goods. The new planned marketing system bringing the buyer and seller together should eliminate these evils, he believes.

Vegetable Pointers

One-half cup of milk added to the water in which cauliflower is being boiled will keep the vegetable firm and fresh looking.

If you wish to remove the skins from beets with greater ease—put the beets in hot water for a short while. Then pour off the hot water and give them cold water immediately. The skins will come off quickly.

Put tomatoes in boiling water before peeling to lighten this particular chore. The same idea can be used when peaches are around once more so make a mental note of it.

If you have put too much salt in the food and are worried fear your whole meal will be a failure take a raw potato and put it in the pot with the overly salted food. The potato will take away much of the salt.

Sheet Repairs

When your sheets begin to wear, rip off the torn part and re-hem the remainder. These smaller sheets may be used for cot for the children, and are also invaluable as draw sheets in case of illness.

Bandits Increase

HSINKING.—(AP)—Banditry is reaching a new peak in Manchoukuo with a 50 per cent increase since early summer recorded by the Japanese army. A bumper maize crop afforded cover for 67,000 brigands.
